

GLOBAL RELOCATION PROFESSIONAL LEADING REAL ESTATE COMPANIES OF THE WORLD®

Who should get it?

Anyone on your relocation team who places or administers outgoing and/or incoming referrals should apply for the designation, including the relocation director and coordinators.

What is it?

The Global Relocation Professional modules are designed to provide training and education to relocation professionals on policies and best practices. Whether it's a seasoned relocation employee or someone brand new to the industry, the GRP modules cover a variety of topics including: managing international referrals, implementing relocation guidelines, network referral policies & procedures, resources, tools and how to promote your LeadingRE affiliation in your local market.

Upon completion, applicants will receive the Global Relocation Professional (GRP) Designation in the member directory signifying a working knowledge of the basics of relocation and the network's policies and procedures. The GRP is a three-year certification; applicants will be required to complete a network policies and procedures module every three years to retain the certification.

Why is it important?

The GRP designation signifies that a relocation professional has a working knowledge of the basics of relocation and the network's policies and procedures. Members will feel more confident placing referrals with companies whose relocation staffs have earned the designation because it indicates that their customers will receive quality service, and that they can expect proper, prompt reporting and referral fee payments.

What does it cost?

The three-year certification is $95.00. Retaining the certification requires a $30 renewal fee and completing a network policies and procedures module.

How do you get it?

The Global Relocation Professional designation is available in the Leadership catalog in the Institute. Applicants must complete all modules and pass the exams.

For additional information contact:

Erika Labutka, Member Solutions Manager
1.866.621.6511
membersolutions@leadingre.com